The film library of the Embassy advised that they had access to some early-generation Soviet film on the Moscow Parade and offered to obtain it from a local newsreel company for a nominal price. While it is known that much footage from [REDACTED] it was felt that the high-quality film, with Russian language sound track, might be useful for PI work. Attachment (herewith) consisting of 110 feet of film, minus sound track which was lost in reproduction, is forwarded for review [REDACTED] 25X1A 25X1A [REDACTED]

I gave the film which came along with this to Dave Brandwein (the whole running lasted five minutes and I saw it before he did). His reaction was that, while the quality of the film was excellent, it actually showed us nothing about the parade that we had not already received. Dave would like to point out to in a nice way and without dampening his enthusiasm, that it would be highly unlikely that he could get anything on the Russian parades through these sources that we have not already seen. While we appreciate his effort, he is not apt to come up with anything unique in parade films. Brandwein still has the film. Both Carl and Don C. know of its existence.
